fiderable time hath elapfed fince many incry mode of corruption which might place the will of the national fenate at their command, have purfued every method that the wiles of political management could devife, to transfer the valuable and extensive patronage of the East into their own hands. But they were repeatedly baffled in all their attempts by that wife jealoufy with which the nation at large have at all times watched and guarded against every new addition to their power. At length, however, they fell upon a method which appeared likely to answer their end, (among a people whose feelings are ever keenly awake to every idea of tyranny and oppression); and they hoped to strike with success at the Company, through the reputations of their

In pursuance of this virtuous design, the most laboured representations were held forth of the enormities committed by those of every rank who were employed in the management of our newly-acquired empire in the East. The needy adherents of a vehal administration, anxious to participate in the wealth in India, filled the trumpet of calumny in every quarter. Inflamed by malice, and rankling with envy, they dispersed among the credulous mul-titude dreadful details of imaginary massacres, and difmal stories of ideal depredations committed by truth, but were folely the exuberant phantoms of their own diffurbed imaginations. Nay, even fome of the molt eloquent orators in the British separe (whose abilities are obscured by the violence of their passions, and whose principles are tarnished by their zeal for persecution) were not assumed to give these improbable falsehoods their public fanction, and to differninate them to the world in lofty rhapsodies of alternate mifrepresentation and acrimonious invec-Their idle tales exceeded even the fiction of romance, or the authenticated cruelties which fober history relates to have difgraced the dark ages before the human mind. No longer, Gentlemen, may we credit the recorded enormities which victory pic-tures to our view of the ceaseless massacres which marked the conquests of Fernandes Cortes in South America, and stained the character of his nation ! No longer may we confider them but as the intales of malice, fabricated to obscure the fame of its conqueror, and tarnish the lustre of his actions, since, in a more enlightened age, fimilar cruelties are attributed to ourfelves, and bale affertions forged abroad to vilify the glory of a conquest as illustrious from its unprecedented brilli-ancy, as for the humanity which marked its comple-tion! A conquest which evidently arose from the necellity of our own lituation in vindication of the na-tional honour, and not from an ambitious avidity for dominion, or an uncontroulable defire for riches— Witness, to the truth of this, you dungeon still existing! witness, this monament ", which yet records the barbarous deed which rouzed us to revenge! witness, the individual fighs of those who are yet alive to mount the massacre of their families and to exceed the massacre of their families and to exceed the massacre of their families.

The gross and illiberal flander which has been so profusely lavished upon us all, has been attended with such effects to the name and character of the fervice in general, that to have wasted the flower of life in India, to have encountered for a long series of years the rigours of an adverse climate, the pangs of illness, and the anxious solicitude of voluntary banishment, is now considered only as resective of this! In vain have examples been thewn by the Europeans of this country, of extensive benevolence; of princely difinterestedness, to which no society of men on earth can produce superior proofs! In vain, ye intrepid defenders of your country's rights, have ye fmothered the rifing flame of rebellion, or taught the haughty Maratta to dread the weight of the British arms! In vain, ye gallant Saviours of the CAR-NATIO! have ye fultained toils, and displayed exertions, which would have done honour to the Roman name! In vain, ye unfortunate prisoners of a ruffian despot, have ye endured a painful captivity, embittered by every fuffering which inventive cruel-ty could frame! Each laurelled foldier is involved in the general acculation, and afferted to be blackened by the crimes which are faid to contaminate the whole! how injurious and infulting! Where, yes, where is the incentive to emulation, where is the fpring to valour, if you are to be thus traduced after the ceafeless perils you have so nobly braved? Hear me, ye veteran followers of lamented Coote! Let me appeal to that free spirit, which dignifies the human mind, and to those quick feelings which are the inseparable ornaments of military breatts. If arms be your profession, is not honour your pursuit? Surely! danger is the foldier's joy, honour his mistress, and glory his delight. Pointing to each of those objects near the Theatre.

bad men; for, as virtue is the brightest ornament of humanity, to vice is its darkest deformity. But the latter are doubtless few, compared with the former. How cruel and unjust then, that the depravity of a small number should stigmatize the remaining virtuous with unmerited ignominy; and that the supposed misconduct of one or two stould involve a whole class of respectable people in the same indiferiminate mass of general delinquency ! Such, however, is our cule; for we are now, in a measure, proscribed by our country, and recorded infamous to the world. All Europe are taught to new us in the light of milereants, no longer deferring of national favour, wawbr-thy of being governed by those laws which never had a partial distinction for their object, and unemitted to a participation in those constitutional rights which we have hitherto considered as a protective barrier for the whole! But, Gentlemen, it was necessary, that those whose factious spirit kindled the slames of war, and whose mad ambition has torn as empire from their injured country, should endeavour to conceal her bleeding wrongs, and ward off her vengeance, by turning the torrent of national ocium from themselves, to make it fall upon the heads of those whose gallantry and spirit have preserved, with stubborn firmness, their remaining kingdoms in the East! Little will it avail us to affert our innoceace at pre fent; delusion must triumph for a while, as the great body of the people seem to have imbibed the pre-judice of a faction against us - But there is a period, when its film shall be removed from the eyes of the public, and affection be subdued, by a full conviction of our wrongs—The virulence of contending par-ties will then fublide; the mift of prepoffeshon difperfe of itself, and popular rancour yield to more generous and charitable fentiments. We shall then receive that justice we have a right to expect from a nation hitherto renowned for its liberality and wifdom; and the lie of the day will be configned to its perishable existence. In the interim, let us devote these insidious arts to the contempt they deserve, and their authors to the reprobation they are destined to receive; for minds that are confcious of their own integrity will rife superior to the attacks of ma-levolence, and display themselves invulnerable to the shafts of calumny! "Mens conscia sibi resti vim contumelia aspernat.

However much it may have been the fathion of the day, to brand us with such opprocessors investing, and to represent us with Bobadil bombasticity, as the "deftroyers of thirty million of people by famine and the fword;" yet I trust it will evidently ap-pear, that no conquest was ever affected wherein a greater attention was paid in the outfet to the calls of humanity, or a more liberal regard observed, on its susequent completion, to the rights of individuals. That the country has been impoverished in its refources, fince we became its possessors, may probably be the case; but this is in some measure the commo fituation of all subjugated prosinces, and was the anticipated confequence of our progress by the eye of wisdom. Was it not peculially the fate of the Roman acquisitions in Afia? Is tot defolation unhappily, to a certain degree, the natical effect of conquert? Where is the conquered country that boafts of its encreafed advantage by reduction, or flourishes beneath the yoke of lubjection. A must and riguant administration, the members of which are animated to a certain degree, the natical effect of conto exertion by principles of patriotism, will doubtless ftrengthen and extend the happiness of the people, and the prosperity of the country over which it prefides; but this is not the case in conquered dominions, where the same enthusiastic principle seldom influences the human mind; and hence it is, that delegated government, far distant from the controuling power, must ever be exposed to a variety of diforders in its internal fystem, detrimental to the country it governs, as well from the unfteadiness of its principle, as from the occasional misappli cation of its powers. Those causes, therefore, which operated to impair the Company's possessions, existed morally in the nature of things, and would have been equally, if not more forcibly felt, if the forcieignty of those countries had devoted to any other First pean power. But even if they had dwed their origin to an opposite source, it is not the less an act of injustice to make us the objects of punishment, who were not the perpetrators of guilt: - The truth however is, there is little reproach to be cast upon the conduct of individuals; for there is a tide in the affairs of human life, which neither the exertion of industry can repel, or the efforts of wisdom subdue-Providence has wifely limited the bounds of earthly properity; and kingdoms, however flourishing, are defined to experience the transitory fate of every fub lunary fubiliance. Nations, like the favourites of for tune, have each their day; the Romans had theirs, and we have seen ours. Sic transit gloria mundi! Rome sunk beneath the burden of her conquests, and the ancient militals of the world exhibits in her fall, a melancholy seture of dethroned ambition, enflaved by bigotry, and fabourd by arms. Britain, exalted by her heroes to the fummit of imperial grandeur, aheady waves beneath the preffure of her glories, and displays in the magnanimity of her efforts to uphold them, an immortalizing testimony of the brilliancy of her cateer. It is now for America to rife into consequence, and branch into a boundless empire that possibly may level others, until, by fome fingular revolution, or, perhaps, by the magnitude of her own conquefts, the falls a victim to adverfity herfelf, and fome new triumphant and tyrannic power raifes the fabric of despotism upon freedom's

I have now, Gentlemen, laid before you the fatal effects with which the power of this despotic authority-this new oriental court of Star-chamber may be attended to your private interests that the immediate and personal injuries to which you are subjected by it, are not the only confiderations, which should rouse your attention. To every man, who possesses the fmallest portion of public virtue, the welfare of his country will be of fome concern; to every man who hopes, within her parental arms, to find a repose for the evening of life, her freedom will be dear! To preserve that welfare inviolate, and to guard that freedom from the baneful blast of tyranny, should be the exertion of every Briton, however distant from his native shore. I will therefore trespals upon your kind indulgence but a very little time longer, for the purpose of fuggesting a few ideas on the subject of the petitions, which may probably be the result of this day's meeting, and which I now humbly move a committee may be appointed to prepare. true we have been feverely wronged, but we have yet the happiness to reflect, that our complaints are not without a remedy. Under the pressure of accumulated injuries an appeal still lies to a Sovereign, whose enlarged benevolence comprehends every portion of his wide extended empire. His Majesty is the father of his people, and in those royal virtues, which fo eminently actors his throne, we must confide for protection and redrefs. There is no suppor to which we can so pleasingly have recourse; and I am perfuaded there is none in which we can repofe fo just a confidence. Let us therefore beware of intemperate zeal, and of measures dictated by too strong a fense of the injuries we fuffer. What Englishman who now hears me, but would blush for his country, if the were capable of basely yielding to his threats, that which she denied to his just representation? The calm fleady voice of reason will lull to silence the vain clamours of faction, and the rancorous hissings of envy; and unbar the avenues to returning justice Let our conduct therefore be marked by temper and moderation. Let us owe to the equity of the state, a redress which irrascibility can never obtain; but which it will be the pride of a generous people to bestow upon our humble request.

I have ventured, Gentlemen, to ftep forth upon the present occasion, under a conviction that the sentiments which I entertain, and have expressed, upon the important subject which has this day convened us, (as far as relates to the principle and effect of this act) will be honoured with the approbation of most of my auditors. I was fensible that a business of this kind only required to be introduced to your notice, and that a spirit of unanimous indignation would mark its infamy. This I have united in do-ing with an ability inadequate to the talk I have affumed, but with a zeal for your interests, and an attachment to the community, that admits of no superiority, and compensates for a desiciency of talents. I am fanguine in my hopes, that the united folicitations of fo respectable a colony, will not be diffegarded by the Legislature at home-I am warm in my wishes, that the neighbouring presidencies, requally injured with ourselves, will be animated by our refolves of this day, to imitate our glorious example. It is my prayer - that those hopes may nei-ther prove delusive, or these wishes remain ungratified! In the awful calamity which has recently befallen the empire, we have feen, that the spirit of an Englishman is not of that ductile texture which readily yields to oppression, and that, when the powers of despair are awakened, they are superior to danger, and rower above difficulty. I therefore firmly trust, that a candid avowal of our feelings, in a respectful representation to Parliament, will meet with e reception from the nation at large, and be productive of the happiest effect to ourselves, by restoring us again to the bosom of our country - No. Gentlemen, you will not affert your rights in vain!
You will not long continue in a state of diffgraceful reparation from the rest of your countrymen? I feel the simulation affurance of success! I already anticipate the day of triumph, which shall affuredly succeed to this day of dejection! a day devoted to rapture, and to the mutual heart-felt congratulations which shall mark the bright æra of our restoration to those rights we are destined to inherit! - It is then that detraction will be immolated at the shrine of candour, and that it will cease to be a crime to have risen to an honourable independence! To complete the delightful picture of returning justice, good-will, and benevo-lence, nothing is wanted, but that the same hand which has inflicted the wound should, like the hero's spear of old, be stretched forth to administer the remedy, and ensure the cure. - Yes, the descendant of the illustrious Chatham shall be among the foremost converts to truth, reason, and liberal fentirose more honourably to power, or became more defervedly intruited with the confidence of his countrymen.' If his genius and his eloquence have excied their admiration, the purity of his moral character has equally attracted the tribute of their esteem; and though fascinated for a while by the spells of faction. and deluded by the milts of prejudice, these wil not long have power to detain his footsteps in the mazy paths of error-he will again become worthy of the great name he bears; again stand forth the terror, not the abettor of despotisin; and having burst his own bonds asunder, he will sty with re-pentant feelings to unbind the ignominious fetters which, in the hour of national delirium, he inconfiderately forged for you. O! dies fortunate! Let its pleasing expectation subdue every angry emotion, and rivet our affections to the flate which protects us. And whilst it obliviously veils the past, let it a dawning ray of benignity to tinge the horizon of our hopes, and to inspirit us to look forward to that auspicious moment, when our grievances will be redreffed by a liberal and enlightened nation—when perfecution thall yeild to justice—and faction be fileneed by truth! Happy moment! It will be for ever dear to recollection! Gratitude shall fondly dwell upon its existence, our children shall venerate its birth, and posterity applaud the exertions which produced it! May we all live to see it! to bless that gracious monarch from whose bounty it is to flow! and to hail, with transport, the immortal day, which in restoring us to the rights of citizens, and men, shall form an illustrious epoch in the history of our times, and be for ever rendered memorable in the annals

The Emperor has also procured them the free liberty of all ports belonging to the French in that quarter, where they have the same privileges as the subjects of France, and may bear the slag of that nation, whenever occasion shall require.

WIND AT DEAL, Jan. 20. S. W.

EDINBURGH. Extrast of a letter from London, Jan. 21. The Princes Elizabeth had yesterday a return of the complaint which had fo nearly been fatal to her, and a general alarm was foread through the various branches of the Royal family, who were prefently brought together to her affiltance at Windsor Castle; but we have the pleasure this morning to hear, that though it is a relapse of her old disorder, there is no immediate danger apprehended.

"Agreeable to the intimation you have had of a certain great personage veering about in his politics a little from the North, he has lately, not only been feen to make a public appearance at Court, but known to have been feveral times on a visit to their M --- s in a stile that has not been very usual with them, and which is thought to indicate a fe-cession of that partiality he possessed for a certain party. Some go so far as to say, that it will be shown upon the meeting of Parliament the first division that may happen in the Lords; but the sact is, his R-1 - is certainly means nothing more than to stand well, in future, with every one, and to make

lence, until the meeting of Parliament." This day, the Presbytery of Edinburgh met here, when the long depending cause, respecting the lega-lity of the presentation granted by the Magistrates and Town-Council, in favour of Dr Andrew Hunter minister of the New Grayfriars parish, to be minister of the Tron Church, was finally fettled. Very long papers were read on the subject, which had been submitted to the consideration of Mess. Maclaurin, Rolland, and Robertson, advocates, for their opinion as counsel, which opinion was also read. These gentlemen did not entertain the smalread. These gentlemen did not entertain the smallest doubt, that both in law, as well as in equity, the Town Council had a clear right to grant the prefentation in the form given to Dr Hunter. After these papers were read, Principal Robertson observed, that, from the beginning of this business, he was perfectly satisfied of the validity of the presentation in question, and that the Council had a legal right to grant it. He was not present when the proposal was made to consult Gentlemen learned in the law upon the subject, otherwise he would certainly have given his negative to fuch a measure. As it had been done, however, and as these profesfional Gentlemen had given fo clear and explicit an opinion, which entirely coincided with his with, he was still further confirmed in it. He therefore moved, that the Prebytery should fustain the prefentation, and give the necessary directions for car-rying the translation of Dr Hunter into effect. This motion was seconded by Dr Macknight. Dr Erskine and Mr Kemp, though they were not altogether satisfied in their own minds, of the right the Town Council had to grant such presentations as the one now under consideration; yet as the learn-ed Counsel had been so decisively of different sentiments, they would not oppose their opinions to those of such learned and respectable Gentlemen. They would therefore make no objections to Principal Robertson's motion being adopted. But, for the fake of those who were to come after them, and to shew the Preflytery had not gone rafhly into a measure they could not help confidering as at least a novel one, they hoped the Preflytery would have no objection to allow all the papers, together with the opinion of the counfel, to be entered upon their record.— This was unanimously agreed to; and the fentence being read in the usual form, the Lord Provost took instruments in the clerk's hands, and craved that the Town Council might be furnished with extracts of all the papers above mentioned. Mr Hugh Bu-chan, Chamberlain, then moved, that as, by this day's decision, there was no occasion for the Prefbytery to determine on the protest taken by him, in name of the Town Council, with the answers by the Presbytery, on account of their delaying the buliness

It is with great fatisfaction, that in obedience to his Majetty's commands, I meet you again in Parliament. You will, I am perfuaded, give your utmost attention to the various objects of public concern, which require your consideration. Your natural folicitude for the welfare of Ireland, and a just fense of her real interests, will direct all your deliberations, and point out to you the line of conduct which may be most conduct to the advantage, and to that lasting connection between the affect king cioms, so essential to the prosperity of Gentlemen of the House of Commons, I have ordered the public accounts and other ne-ceffary papers to be laid before you. The principle which you so wifely established, of preventing the accumulation of the national debt, will I hope ap-pear already to have proved successful; and I enterpear already to have proved deceased; and I deter-tain no doubt that your wifdom will perfevere in mea-fures which in their operation promife such benefi-cial effects. His Majesty relies with considence up-on your grant of such supplies as are necessary for the public service, and for the honourable support of his government.

My Lords and Gentlemen, My Lords and Gentlemen,

A systematic improvement of the police, and a vigarous execution of the laws are effential not only to the due collection of the public revenue, but to the security of private property, and indeed to the protection of society. The frequent outrages which have been committed in some parts of this kingdom, will particularly call your attention to this important object.

It is unnecessary for me to recommend the Prorestant Charter Schools to your protection, or to e-numerate the happy effects which may be derived from your continued attention to the Linen and other Manufactures, to the Agriculture, and to the Fisheries of the kingdom, and to such measures as may animate the industry, extend the education, and improve the morals of the people.

It will ever be my ambition to promote the real interests of Ireland, and to contribute by all the means in my power towards establishing its future prosperity, on the furest and mod lasting founda-

Spoilaits arma specifin.—Juv.

Fast. That, till within these sew years past, the business of distillery in Scotland was carried on folely for the consumpt of this country by a number, of traders dispersed throughout different counties, in this of a small or moderate size.

Trab.—This is a melancholy truth. At the Union, Scotland was flattered with a great trade, and immediate communication of riches. M. Daniel de Foe affirms, after stating the particular branches, 'That Scotland would draw a balance of 300,000 l. Sterling per annum, if the will apply herself to improving and increasing her trade, which, if he does not, must be ber own small the The country so allowed the well-sit buit: But so it has happened, this Scotland, till within a late period, languished under every circumstance of depts since and too many of the manual sures have been carried on like the business of distillatery by small dispected traders, without capital, and without spirit, faintly struggling to supply the consumpt of a fery by mail disperred traders, without capital, and with-out fairly faintly funggling to fupply the continue of a mile or two promise them, and even this humble object continuing beyond their reach. What purpose do the Gentlemen of the Excise mean to serve in setting forth this hamiliating sact? By describing the disease of their country, do they mean to say, that she ought to have con-tinued without a cure? Certainly. The very men are im-mediately charged as criminal, who have attempted to bring a remery.

**Ell 2.—** That the home-made spirit formerly used in Scotland, was extracted from grain of the growth of its own lands; all of which being malted, and no mixture of raw grain or other ingredients being then known, the produce was a wholesome and agreeable spirit.

I'll they learned the art of spirit-making from the **Duch.** By that singerious and industrious people they were taught, that no mixore malt was necediary than to bring on a ferrmentation, and that grain of all kinds could be diffilled in a raw state, with inceels. This was a capital improvement. Distinction before that time had been confined to burley; whereas experiment proved, that other corn, and that of the interior before that time had been considered to burley; whereas experiment proved, that other corn, and that of the interior force that the hash so that they may all be immediately proved. How are they to prove, that the spirits from timented grain are mirebulesome? Does sprung carn make more wholesome bread, than that which is dry and entire? It is a fectous fact, that a great pair of the earn of this country is often infertably statisted in the field, whether we will, or will not, by wet harvoits as to the infine quality, of being more ogretably, it can as little or proved, because it depends upon the caprices of taile and habit-Highland whilly is prized by natives for the flavour of page rock, which few other people can endure. In lingland, no raw upirits are used: whiley avoided like poison. Recitified spirits from raw torm are grateful to the palate, and agreeable to the people. If whilly be the favouries of the Excise, why do they at this moment prohibit thousand in and join to force the limbitants of this country into the taste of England? It is both a Fact and a Turnly, that the Excise at this moment will not allow willfully to be made it for the use of the people. They infit upon its being used at a degree of strength which would be fast to the confumer, or that the price shall be enhanced by an additional recitionation—in stort, that the late act takes notice of recission given for this is, that the late act takes notice of recissed prints only, without mention of the whishy of Scotland, and therefore no attention is to be paid to it.

Fall 3.— That very little, if any core spirit or British brandy was at this period imported from England into England.

Truth—All the dealers of any standing in Edinburgh, remember, and are ready to prove, that British brands, and compounds, were, at the period imported from England into Scotland in large quantifies; and it is also a fact, that riders have, within this month, arrived in Edinburgh to recommence the same business. A reside with gin from England lies in Leith harbour at this monenes. It is true, that there was a time when no spirits, or almost any manufactured article, were sent from Scotland into England. The time was, when the London post arrived in Edinburgh with a single letter. The
